About Assistive Technology & the AT Network

Assistive technology (AT) includes tools and strategies. AT is used by people with disabilities to accomplish tasks and achieve their goals.

The range of products is huge.
It covers everything from Velcro strips to voice recognition software to buttonhooks to modified vans.

What is the AT Network?

The AT Network is a project of the California Department of Rehabilitation.

It is coordinated by the California Foundation for Independent Living Centers

The AT Network is growing.
It is made up of organizations and people who know about technology for people with all types of abilities and disabilities.

The Network includes:
AT Centers; community technology centers;
senior centers; family support organizations;
Independent Living Centers; student programs;
individual service providers;
and many more.
